Kevin Levermore's Story:

Born in Jamaica and raised by parents with limited educational opportunities, I know firsthand the profound impact that community support can have. When I was struggling to pursue higher education, it was a generous individual in my community who stepped in and covered my college tuition, changing the course of my life.

This act of kindness inspired me to create The Levermore Foundation, a nonprofit organization dedicated to "Educating Our Future Leaders". Our mission is to provide young people with the educational opportunities they need to transform their lives.

My motivation? I know there are brilliant young minds out there, smarter than I ever was, who just need access to the right resources to change their lives and shape the future. I am passionate about giving them that chance, fostering education, and building stronger communities through the power of knowledge.

Let's join forces to create a brighter future for the next generation.

After years of working with Toshiba and HP, I gained a wealth of knowledge in creating solutions for business workflow and productivity.

During that time, I identified a challenge in the market that limited business owners who needed technology equipment.

So, I started National Business Technologies.

We offer short-term agreements to use capital equipment and services daily, weekly or monthly with no hidden costs, lengthy lease terms or financial restrictions.
